

Letter from the President

This is an exciting time for environmental education in Utah and nationally. Increased attention to environmental issues along with increased support and recognition in our own community translate into a critical role for the Utah Society for Environmental Education (USEE). This strategic plan, with its revised mission and vision, will serve as our guiding commitment to high-quality, effective environmental education.

USEE has been a recognized leader in environmental education, receiving local, regional, and national awards for our leadership and innovative programs. We are often called on to share our successes with our sister affiliate organizations of the North American Association for Environmental Education. These successes and the wishes of the environmental education community in Utah have laid the foundation for our 2007-2010 Strategic Plan

This document is as dynamic as USEE, seeking opportunity, yet rooted in a visionary mission. As the challenges and opportunities emerge, this strategic plan will adapt. It is a living document dependent on the capable hands of our staff, board, and environmental education community of Utah for its continued importance and viability.

Chris Corroon
Board President
